Extreme Heat

Extreme heat or heat waves occur when the temperature reaches extremely high levels or when the combination of heat and humidity causes the air to become oppressive. Children, older adults, outside workers, and people with disabilities are more prone to heat exhaustion. Make sure to stay hydrated with water, stay in cool areas when possible, and wear light-weight, light colored, loose fitting clothing. During extreme heat, the temperature in your car could quickly become deadly. Please make sure to never leave children or pets in your car unattended. For more information on ways to beat the heat, please visit: www.cdc.gov/extremeheat
